Musings for the Sagittarius Full Moon and the Summer Solstice

Every year as we circle around our sun, we experience a summer and winter solstice. At the summer solstice we have the longest day/shortest night with the sun being overhead at midday. In our southern hemisphere we are at this time, also moving closer to our galactic centre and sun which is found near the signs of Sagittarius Scorpio and Ophiuchus. The central vortex or black hole of our galaxy is found in Sagittarius behind the dark cosmic cloud we can see in the night sky called the dark rift.

One theme that links the sign of Sagittarius and the Summer Solstice is the sun- the sun of our local solar system which creates the Summer Solstice and also the central sun of our galaxy which we have been drawing closer to through the signs of Scorpio Sagittarius and Ophiuchus. In the pictures above you can get an idea of this proximity.

If we align with own inner sun which is our soul and spirit, we can then align with the greater suns. We first become a citizen of our own self, then of the solar system and eventually a citizen of the galaxy. In Sagittarius the archer points the way, Scorpio provides a hook to “hook” us in and Ophiuchus provides healing and grounding through the healing snake and staff.

I’ve found it helps me in these challenging times to see the big picture so that I can detach and be less lost in emotional reactions which don’t help me find ways to be grounded and useful. Emotions are an important force to experience and understand, however we also need to develop the wisdom to know when they are not helping us and when we need to detach.

Ophiuchus is seen as a person, holding a snake, and is connected with famous healer teacher Asclepius and the Asclepian healing temples in ancient Greece which were home to snakes used in healings for the people who came. The sign of Ophiuchus reminds me of the healing that is available when we connect and align to our inner “snake”, which aligns and heals through the mystic sun’s light. There is a promise here of a deep healing available through the love light and power of the galactic sun.

Come to both ceremonies and learn more together about how we can maintain our vitality and aliveness in the face of these times of crisis and challenge.
